MULES-While the total arrivals were liberal, a number were consigned to the dealers direct and the commission supply represented not more than $200 head. The opening market was rather quiet and lacking developments. Owing to some unfilled British pack mule contracts, the demand for 14 to 152 hand mules was very active among the dealers, but as the supply included searcely any of the class, the effectiveness of this demand was lost. Most of the offections were needling to good, big mules for which, while fair, the request is not as strong as about ten days ago. The early subside trade did not appear to, be of large dimensions.
